South America Based Expert to Present at AgServe Agriculture Outlook Summit in St. Louis, Missouri

St. Louis, MO, January 19, 2017 – AgServe.com announced today that Pablo Adreani, founder of AgriPAC Consultants in Argentina, will present the outlook for South American agriculture at the March 9, 2017 AgServe Agriculture Outlook Summit in St. Louis, Missouri.

Mr. Adreani, also President of Pablo Adreani Associates, is a former trader for Cargill Argentina, founding partner of the Argentine Biofuels Association and the Argentine Corn Association. Pablo brings great experience and knowledge to this event. As a consultant for the United Soybean Board and the U.S. Soybean Export Council (USSEC), Pablo understands the dynamics of South American agriculture on U.S. producers and agribusinesses.

Dr. Sam Funk, CEO and Executive Economist of AgServe, shared the unique strengths Mr. Adreani brings to the in-person agriculture outlook event.

“Pablo Adreani’s analyses of Argentina and Brazil have been used in strategic planning by several U.S. organizations considering the changing face of South American agriculture,” said Funk. “His knowledge of policy and trade impacts for production and disposition in that major area supplying global exports is outstanding. Pablo’s session will benefit attendees from first-hand information sharing from an expert direct from the heart of the change in Argentina.”

The AgServe Agriculture Outlook event is bringing outstanding information to a one-day format. Noted experts in their fields include Dr. Scott Brown presenting on Livestock and Poultry sectors; Mr. Dan Manternach on Grains and Financial Indicators; Dr. Paul Kindinger on the new Trump Administration; and Dr. Funk examining the outlook for the Oilseed sector.
